

SDA RULES' ELIGIBILITY PROVISIONS

There are 2 relevant SDA eligibility criteria. If either of these criteria match a participants' circumstances, then there's a case for SDA eligibility to be explored.

Does the participant have an "extreme functional impairment"?

1. Does the participant endure extremely reduced functional capacity affecting their mobility or self-care or self-management? Yes No
2. Does the participant have a very high need for person to person supports? Yes No

If answers to both 1 and 2 are yes (not just one of the answers!) then there's a case for SDA eligibility to be explored.

Alternately does the participant have "very high support needs"?

- a. Has the participant previously lived in SDA for extended periods and has this impacted the capacity of the participant to transition to alternative living arrangements and supports? Yes No

If the answer above is yes, then there is a case for SDA eligibility to be explored on the basis of previous accommodation history alone.

- b. Does the participant have a very high level need for person to person supports for a significant part of the day? Yes No and either;

- (i) the participant's informal support network is limited or not sustainable. Yes No
- (ii) the participant is at risk or poses a risk to others, risks which could be mitigated by the provision of SDA. Yes No

If the answer to b is yes and either the answer to (i) or (ii) is yes, then there is a case for SDA eligibility to be explored.
